American Evacuation From S. China

Hospital Ship As Floating Hotel

Full details of plans for the evacuation of American citizens from South China were disclosed by Vice-Admiral Oscar C. Badger, Commander-in-Chief of the United States Naval Forces, Western Pacific, at a press conference held in the American Club, Hongkong Bank building, this morning. He said that by reason of the fact certain American citizens would not be allowed through Hongkong because they could not state any place at which they could stay, the hospital ship Repose, which is due shortly, will be utilized as a floating transit hotel until some ship was ready to take the evacuees away.

Admiral Badger stated that the Repose had now alongside a ship and was taking on board fresh vegetables, tomatoes and cereal from the United States, and frozen meats enough for 1,000 people for 30 days.

At the conclusion of his statement, Admiral Badger, in reply to a correspondent's question as to whether the U.S. Fleet, if offered facilities at Formosa, would use it as a base in the event of evacuating from Tsinling, stated that that was a matter for high Government decision to be settled in London and Washington. He added that he did not mind being quoted on his personal opinion which was that Formosa was not suitable for the needs of a force of his size and it was fairly busy at present with the support of the Chinese force.

NOT PALATIAL

With regard to the Repose being used as a floating hotel, Admiral Badger made it clear that Navy accommodation was adequate but not palatial and commercial rates—namely steerage—would be charged. People would have to accept inconveniences such as no private bathrooms, etc. The Repose was due to arrive on June 3.

Admiral Badger began his conference by explaining why he was here. He said he came to contact Minister Counsellor Clark, head of the U.S. Embassy Group in Canton in connection with problems confronting them in South and some part of Western China. It was not a very difficult problem—but it required certain assistance by the Navy for the Consular groups.

There were some Americans in Canton and the Canton area and in other parts of China who wanted to leave China.

"One of our difficulties is that Hongkong is so full of people now that those Americans desiring to evacuate cannot get clear through Hongkong by the local authorities unless they can state that they have a place to stay at when they come to Hongkong," said the Admiral. "And there are very few of them who can make such a statement. There are about 120 Americans in the Chungking area who although they have transport cannot get to Hongkong because they have no place to stay."

Devaluation Considerations

THE persistency with which New York financial interests, or rather speculators, resurrect rumours of devaluation of Sterling, is extraordinary in view of the categorical declarations by Sir Stafford Cripps that there is no intention of carrying out any such measure. Moreover, these so-called pundits take especial delight in pinning their prophecies to the Pound, deliberately ignoring the fact that if Sterling is devalued, so also must be the rest of the European currencies, making it virtually impossible for Britain to take unilateral action in revising its own currency. Also lost sight of is the salient fact that Britain's financial policy is an integral part of her long-term economic policy, and that to attempt to divorce one from the other would be to re-pudiate a line of action which has already achieved much towards effecting the nation's recovery. Actually the three main factors which have influenced the position of the United Kingdom have had a corresponding effect on nearly half the world's population. In the first place, Britain stands to bay for a fifth of all imports from overseas investments; in the second place, the cost of raw materials has risen three times since 1938; and in the third place, the immense unbalance between the Western hemisphere and the rest of the world in trade as a result of World War II has caused a dollar shortage. There are decisive influences in the formulating and carrying out of British policy, not only to effect economic and social recovery, but for the purpose of strengthening the Pound Sterling. The same influences explain the continuation of austerity and high taxation which combat inflation and simultaneously assist in making Sterling a completely independent currency as well as a medium of the largest trading bloc in the world. It is true that a devalued currency makes exporting easier, but it also increases the cost of imports and therefore, in the long run, must also increase the cost of manufactures produced from raw materials bought at higher prices. The British Government's policy has been well defined: it is not to devalue, but to concentrate on striving for the highest possible efficiency on a greater output per man-hour. And for this two methods are being used. The most obvious is the re-equipping of industries with the latest and best machinery—which is a long-term project. The second method, and one on which short-term results must be attained, is a better use of existing man-power and machinery. That is the only course which can give higher production and enable British industries to cut costs so that they can continue to expand exports in the face of markets which are becoming increasingly buyers' markets. It is, in addition, the best protection for Sterling, and if successful, makes devaluation as unnecessary as it is undesirable.

Abrupt End To Battle Of Shanghai

SURRENDER OF LAST RESISTANCE POINTS

Foreigners Play Big Part In The Final Phases

Foreign Aid Bill Passed

Washington, May 26.—The House of Representatives today passed the US$5,617,470,000 foreign aid bill after going most of the way to meet President Truman's last-minute appeal for more money.

Passage was by a standing vote of 193-27. The measure now goes to the Senate.

In a letter read just before the final vote, on the compromise measure, Mr. Truman particularly urged the House to approve the $154,000,000 cut by the Appropriations Committee from his requested $1,000,000,000 for the occupied areas. The House met him halfway on that request by voting 120-39 to restore $75,000,000 of the cut, bringing it to $25,000,000 the total for the occupied areas in the fiscal year 1950.

Besides $25,000,000 for the occupied areas, the bill carries $3,568,470,000 for Marshall Plan spending. Under the compromise, this amount can be spent during the first 10½ months of the fiscal year 1950 instead of being spread over 12 months. The administration will be able to come back for more money for the final month and a half of the fiscal year 1950. This would nearly equal the spending rate proposed by Mr. Truman for the second year of the Marshall Plan.

KIDS FROM THE FARMS

"They were poor farm kids from Honan," said Mr. Topper, "and right up to me and they kept saying—our officers told us to fight to the end, and we obey orders—we had to convince them their officers had quit. I don't know when the Communists came in and got them, I was too tired to care."

Even more bizarre was the final surrender nearby of the Embankment Building where 1,000 civilians were trapped with a few hundred Nationalist soldiers. Here, American John Powell, Editor of the China Weekly Review and son of the man who lost his feet from maltreatment in a Japanese prison camp, and other foreigners and Chinese civilians managed during the night to go all the Nationalists concentrated on one floor of the building and convinced them the game was up. But on the roof a few holdout Nationalists wouldn't come down. Eventually the downstairs Nationalists tried to send an envoy to the Communists in Szechuan Bridge, the rooftop Nationalists shot at them.

HEARTBREAKING

"It was heartbreaking," said Mr. Powell. "They all wanted to quit but were afraid to stop. We finally got them to disarm themselves. Then I went upstairs to see how my wife was getting along, then made another try to get the rooftop Nationalists to listen to reason and then went back down where the disarmed Nationalists were gathered."

I was terribly tired by this time. I started talking to these soldiers again, then I noticed they were armed again. Then it hit me like a dash of cold water that these men were Communists. While I was gone the Reds had entered and captured the surrender of the Nationalists.

Riot Follows Soccer Game

Istanbul, May 26.—Violent rioting broke out in the centre of Istanbul's European district tonight in the wake of a huge demonstration, protesting against Turkey's loss of a football match in the Mediterranean Cup competition in Athens last Friday.

A mob numbering thousands marched from Inonu Stadium through Maxim Circle down the Rue de Pera, Istanbul's great shopping district, and literally threw itself against a company of mounted police and swarms of gendarmes and foot police. Some broke through.

Precisely where they intended to go was not clear, but it may have been the Greek Consulate or the Hellenic Sporting Club.

FRENZIED STUDENTS

Frenzied students and sports lovers waving flags and placards harangued anti-Greek fell back under the first charge of the police. Their leaders tried to pacify them and help them disband, but wild howling cut them off. They charged again and again.

Some more got through, but in general the police held firm. After nearly an hour of skirmishing between the mob leaders and police spokesmen, the crowd agreed to march in an orderly manner out of the centre of the town.

A police barricade was set up at a street which crosses the Rue de Pera where it turns down to the Greek Consulate.

Injuries appeared to be few, but tempers were high even as the mob marched away, still cordoned by mounted police.

The outburst followed a peaceful demonstration at the Inonu Stadium, where 20,000 cheered wildly the national soccer team which, after losers from Athens, and cried derisively at the Greeks and Italians.

PROTEST MEETING

A protest meeting was arranged by student leaders to voice criticism of what they and the newspapers have termed unfriendly treatment given the Turkish team during the Mediterranean Cup matches and particularly the victory of the Italians over the Turks in the crucial game last Friday.

"Let the Greeks not forget Sakarya," exclaimed the speaker of the audience, who gave approval. (The Sakarya River battle was one of the turning points for the Turks in the Greco-Turkish war in 1921).

Twenty thousand people saw Turkey defeat Turkey 3-2 in the Mediterranean Friendship Cup soccer tournament at Athens on Friday.

Play had to be halted for five minutes in the second half when Aldo Puccinelli kicked the winning goal. The Turks claimed that he was offside and both teams milled around the centre of the field, though no blows were struck. Police went on to the field and protected the referee.

When the Italians complained to the referee at an earlier stage of the game, the Greek crowd which had cheered the Italians booted the Greek referee.

"Going Up" For Talks

Mr. Vyshinsky Starts Saying "No" Again

Paris, May 26.—The Soviet Foreign Minister, Mr. Andrei Vyshinsky, today rejected any suggestion that the Soviet Union let the Eastern Zone of Germany join the new Western Federal state of Germany.

At a meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers, which more closely resembled some of the more bitter earlier sessions, Mr. Vyshinsky denounced the agreement, reached by Britain, the United States and France in Washington earlier this year, to proceed with a separate Western German state.

Japan's Recovery

Big Claims Made By MacArthur

New York, May 26.—General Douglas MacArthur, Supreme Allied Commander in Japan, claimed today that Japan had made a greater postwar economic recovery than many European countries and had increased her industrial output more than

United States.

He said: "The whole series of questions of tripartite fortification at Washington anticipates that decisions should be taken by the majority—this comes to the same thing as saying that the Americans are masters of Germany. If so for this reason Russia cannot adhere to such a system."

That seemed to blast any hopes of agreement here because the West was planning

eventually to propose to Russia that agreement on Germany could be achieved only if the Russians were willing to let

Eastern Germany join the new

Western German state—the West will not turn back.

It would be useful to confront the thousands of refugees from Eastern Germany and ask them why they are leaving heaven to come and embarrass us with their presence."

Each of the three Western Ministers again rejected Mr.

Vyshinsky's proposal to go back to Potsdam and its attempt to four-power military rule of Germany.

The U.S. Secretary of State,

Mr. Acheson, denounced the Russian plan as one that no "reasonably prudent man" could afford.

"We in the West have created near-unity, raised economic standards, settled very many offending problems, and by a vast effort, we have created a peaceful democratic society with the economic structure."

"It is not to be undone," said Mr. Acheson.

Mr. Vyshinsky was described his remarks.

WOMANSENSE

Fly-away Look

THE FLOATING PANELS are very new, any wearer is likely to prefer them. They are attached to the belt to be worn at will, since an extra belt permits frock to be worn without benefit of the panels. Here is a hardy perennial done up to this season's specifications—the favourite navy sheer crepe afternoon dress. This one is a sheath with high neck and puffed sleeves set into the dropped shoulder.

As Clothes Go— What Goes Under?

TOO much boning may well be the cry of customers who buy a boned strapless bra to wear with a boned strapless dress.

Answering the fitting problems of strapless fashions, corsetiers in several Fifth Avenue shops advise:

1. Take out the bones of the dress and fit a boned strapless brassiere.

2. If a customer needs a boned bra in addition to the boning of the dress, she'll just have to put up with the "prison bar" effect of the boning.

3. A wired strapless brassiere gives the wearer who needs that extra support a better uplift and doesn't detract from the shaping of the boned dress.

The first suggestion is vetoed by dress designers who shape the bodices of strapless dresses with boning.

Wearing both a boned strapless bra and a boned strapless dress is the majority choice among wearers who need the extra support. Corsetiers surveyed believe that the boned cotton dresses easily cover up the boning of the brassiere. When it comes to the sheer strapless dresses for late afternoon or evening wear, the boned bodices are lined so that there's a good cover-up for foundations.

Wired Bra Support

"A wired bra gives better support," is the opinion of these corsetiers. They recommend the wire bra particularly for sizes B plus and C cups.

Dog Fear In A Child

BY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

A GREAT many young children suffer from fear of dogs. This problem may be especially frequent and severe in towns, villages and scattered areas, where laws governing dogs do not exist or are not enforced.

Here is a case, and the lady related as follows:

"I have a brother five years old who is afraid of dogs. Next year he will start school and will probably be running and screaming home most of the time as he lives in a rural community and there are a few dogs in the neighbourhood. As far as we know he has had no reason to be afraid of dogs.

"We have a dog that my children play with but whenever my little brother comes he won't venture outside unless this dog is tied.

No Visible Reason.

"My parents do not have a dog now. They did have one that he was afraid of for no visible reason.

"I think my mother makes a mistake in telling other people before him he is afraid of dogs. She has done this many times.

"The only solution I have is for them to get a newborn pup and raise it on the bottle, encouraging my little brother to do most of the feeding, of course. Have you another solution?"

Somewhat as follows I replied: The problem is not that boy but your mother. She doubtless has inspired the fear in him by her talk. You have presented two basic principles of helping this child overcome his fear of dogs. But you are probably the last person in the world whose advice your mother would take. You see, you are a young mother yourself and your mother has this young son, your brother. These facts render it psychologically hard for her to profit from any suggestions from you, however good they may be.

Then she is the more resistant to your suggestions since you laugh at her silly beliefs in the superstition of baby markings.

But if you are very calm and adroit, you might at some companionable time with your mother, feed her to see why she should never discuss this child's fears in his presence.

Unfortunately, most mothers whose young children have strong fears incline to tell everybody that comes around about these fears while the child is listening.

When this little brother comes to your house, be sure your dog is tied so he will not have more fears. Persuade your children never to laugh at his fears, but to try to help him overcome them. You might buy such a pup as you suggested, and have this little brother often come to your place to feed it. Collect lots of pictures and stories of dogs. Often show him these pictures and read to him these stories.

The half bra, which comes in the category of wired bras, in terms of construction, is another suggestion for achieving a low and bare neckline. The problem of double boning is minimized because the half-bra has boning on the lower half of the cups.

Strapless slips are not encroaching on solds of strapless bras, those in the corset department surveyed maintain. They see the strapless slip as particularly adaptable in small sizes.

The majority choice for strapless dresses are the boned strapless bras and petticoats, they believe.

The first suggestion is vetoed by dress designers who shape the bodices of strapless dresses with boning.

Wearing both a boned strapless bra and a boned strapless dress is the majority choice among wearers who need the extra support. Corsetiers surveyed believe that the boned cotton dresses easily cover up the boning of the brassiere. When it comes to the sheer strapless dresses for late afternoon or evening wear, the boned bodices are lined so that there's a good cover-up for foundations.

AS CLOTHES GO, so do undergarments, especially bras and slips. Comes the off-the-shoulder neckline, the backless sun dress, the filmy chiffon dress top, and here we have a good answer to the strap problem in the form of a new strapless combined bra and slip. This neat design has the top lightly boned and elasticized, and a side zipper assures an absolutely snug fit. The skirt is slightly flared.

Tirassa came out of the kitchen at the Vanderbilt Hotel to place the blame for the decline in good eating among singers squarely where it belongs, on the microphone.

"They don't need a body like a sounding board any more," he snorted. "That little electric gadget tosses out the voice for them. But it's not the same to me, and in theatres or opera houses where they have no microphone you can immediately notice the difference in the voices—if you can hear them."

Tirassa was "stolen" from Caruso, who knew he loved opera and used the lure of cooking for real opera stars to tempt him away. After the great tenor's death about two years later the hotel forgave Tirassa and asked him to come back.

Gives Recipe

Now he occasionally slides some of Caruso's favourite dishes into the menus—venetian Marengo, for example, or strawberries Caruso, which he created because Mme. Melba boasted pointedly one night that a famous chef had created peach Melba for her.

America Accused Of "Coddling" Japanese

"BREAKING FAITH" WITH ALLIES: ROMULO

Washington, May 26.—The Philippines today accused the United States of "coddling" Japan at the expense of America's war-time allies in the Pacific.

The charge was made by Mr Carlos P. Romulo at the Far Eastern Commission's weekly meeting. At the same time, he accused the US of breaking faith with the Philippines in cancelling further Japanese war reparations.

Dr W. K. Lee, of China, joined the attack and urged the US to adopt a "more realistic" attitude toward the Japanese.

Mr Romulo said that America, under the 1946 Philippine rehabilitation act, committed itself, "in principle", to collect $4,500,000,000 from Japan. He said $520,000,000 in American aid provided by the 1946 act was, in effect, an advanced payment.

Thus far, he said, including American aid and $11,000,000 from Japan, only nine percent of the Philippines war damage had been paid.

The target of Mr Romulo's attack was the US order to Gen. Douglas MacArthur to halt further preliminary reparations deliveries to the Philippines, China, Britain and the Netherlands.

He said the Philippines suffered most heavily from the Japanese aggression, with the possible exception of China. Therefore, he said, it was entitled to preferential treatment in collecting damages.

VITAL ROLE'

Assets obtained by Japanese reparations had been assigned "a vital strategic role" in the post-war industrial development and recovery programme of the islands.

He said: "The cessation of the expected payments would cause a serious disruption in the economic development timetable of the Republic, and a grave dislocation of its economic structure."

The Philippines Government is unable to understand why the United States should so suddenly come to the conclusion that the needs of the 11 member nations of the Far Eastern Commission should be subordinated to the needs of the former enemy country.

"The Philippines shares the United States concern for a just peace with Japan, but a just peace does not mean a soft peace." A just peace does not mean leaving the victims of Japanese aggression to shift for themselves while Japan is coddled and permitted to re-establish itself as the dominant industrial power in the Far East."

Voicing concern that the Japanese may eventually rearm, Mr Romulo said he doubted that the Japanese would "forget and forgive" the atom bombing of Nagasaki and Hiroshima as readily as the Americans had forgotten Pearl Harbour, Corregidor and Batan.

CHINA'S VIEW

For China, Dr Lee said the reforms made by Gen MacArthur were "only the beginning".

SIDE GLANCES By Galbraith

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

First Hongkongites Were Not Pirates

Sir.—In common with many other Chinese born in Hongkong I deeply resent the statement made by two Reform Club members that when the British first took over this "barren rock" it was peopled by pirates and cut-throats.

My own family has lived within what is now British-administered territory for twenty-five generations—since about the time that William the Conqueror landed in Britain!

Far from being desperados of the type envisaged by these gentlemen in their gross flights of imagination, we have owned large tracts of land locally, although we, unfortunately, lost them when the territory changed hands.

An ancestral tablet in our village here will show the males of our family were people of culture—one married a Princess of the Imperial Court and some had scholastic attainments of the highest rank held in that Court in Peking.

While the face of the Island where Hongkong city stands to-day may have been "barren and rocky"—on account of its bleak northern exposure, in winter—the southern slopes of the Island were dotted with habitations and villages as was also that part of the mainland which is now under British rule, and the people were mostly officials, farmers and gentry, with the usual fisherfolk around the bays. The latter not requiring deep water for their craft, were quite content with the sheltered facilities available at such warm southern localities as Aberdeen.

Here there were of course no pirates—only a few foreign smugglers and opium craft patronised Hongkong in those early days, regarding it as a safe refuge where they might wait out typhoons with their valuable "merchandise" without fear of miasma!

Apart from the gratuitous insult flung by these two uninformed persons in the face of those people who have been educated residents of Hongkong since times when the speakers' fathers were most probably decorating themselves with wood in some British forest primeval, I also resent the implication that Chinese citizens do not have a sufficiently deep interest in the welfare of this Colony today to be allowed a vote.

In the words of old member of the Corps, the late Mr Henry Westlake was appointed Garrison Sergeant-Major in Hongkong in succession to S.M. Higby and joined the HKVDC on September 20, 1922. He was promoted to Lieutenant and QM on May 27, 1930, and Captain and Quartermaster on January 7, 1938. He went on leave prior to retirement early in 1938.

His son, Mr H. F. Westlake, also a Volunteer and who was in the Government service, pre-deceased him here.

In the words of old member of the Corps, the late Mr Henry Westlake was "a sergeant-major who was feared for his discipline, but when one got to know him and like and respect him, one soon realised that his bark was a good deal worse than his bite."

When he retired the Commandant was Col. R. C. E. Anderson, DSO, MC, now retired Brigadier, and the late Mr Westlake was presented with a canteen from all ranks as a token of the esteem in which he was held.

Memorial Day

Monday next is Memorial day in the United States. In celebration of the day, the American citizens in the Colony will gather at the Monument at the junction of Tin Lok Lane and Loughton Hill Road at 11 a.m. for a brief memorial service following which wreaths will be laid in the cemeteries.

It is hoped as many Americans as possible will attend.

Vyshinsky Now Saying "No"

This French Foreign Minister M. Robert Schuman, described the Soviet proposal as an attempt to "put a roof on a house that does not have any walls."

The sharpest exchange came between Mr. Vyshinsky and Mr. Bevin after Mr. Vyshinsky had told of great economic recovery in Eastern Germany under Soviet control and vast unemployment in Western Allied Germany.

Mr. Bevin said: "I thank Mr. Vyshinsky for his remarkable figures of recovery. I would like to consult the many people who work in the western zone about the possibility of these figures being confirmed before returning to the United

Asiatic Quota No Danger To Australia

PROFESSOR'S VIEW

Melbourne, May 26.—Suggestions that a quota of "a thousand or so Asiatics" would pollute Australians biologically are ridiculous, according to one of Australia's best known eugenists, Professor W. E. Agar.

Professor Agar pointed out he was ignoring the political and economic aspects.

He was arguing in favour of a plea by Professor W. MacMahon Ball, former British representative in Japan, for a quota of Asiatics to be allowed into Australia to soften Asiatic feeling to the White Australia policy.

"Biologically, Australians can remain white by admitting a quota of coloured people," he said.

Professor MacMahon Ball, Professor MacMahon Ball, now professor of Political Science at Melbourne University, urged the easing of the White Australia policy as a tactful political move against the day America pulled out of the Pacific and left Australia to defend themselves.

Even if we do not all possess valid British passports" (and these are not so easily obtained as might be imagined) the fact that we may be still nominally good nationals of China does not prevent us from being equally good citizens of Hongkong and keenly alive to the interests of this Colony and the needs of its population, in the way of a more efficient administration than that prevailing at present.

We would like to see capable, just and honest Britons heading the legislation here with which we have all our lives to deal, and under whose protection we are happy to live and prosper. (Needless to say we prefer the genuine British to those "more British than the British")

Even if ourselves ineligible to hold office, it is too much to ask that we who have hand in hand with our friends the British pioneers, built up Hongkong into what it is today, the second port of the Empire, should be allowed the privilege of a vote as some small reward for our share in the labours faithfully carried out which have proved so fruitful?

We do feel that the giving of this small amount of "face" to us, the real Hongkong born, will do no harm to anyone and may indeed do a great deal to bolster the flagging morale of those amongst us who may have even become a little laggard in our loyalty through being for so long perpetually ignored in all our representations by the powers that be."

Rebels Blow Up Bridge

In Burma

Rangoon, May 26.—Rebels have been active in the rear of advancing Burmese Government forces on the Daku front, an official communiqué said tonight.

Dalku, an important railway town 75 miles north of Rangoon, was recently recaptured by Government troops.

While insurgents attacked Intaw, nearly 50 miles to the rear of Dalku, other rebels blew up a bridge on the Rangoon-Mandalay Railway, only 23 miles north of the capital, the communiqué stated.

It did not specify to which group the insurgents belonged.

Mopping up of Karen-held villages north of Dalku continued, the communiqué stated.

Government troops attacked villages held by Karen and Communists in the Irrawaddy delta area, south-west of Rangoon.

In Upper Burma repeated insurgent onslaughts on the railway terminus of Yeu, west of Shwebo, are reported.

Insurgents straddling the Irrawaddy River, just north of Mandalay, cut off all river traffic to the Temple City, Burma Radio announced tonight.

In the Malaya and Singu areas, near Mandalay, insurgents had begun to collect taxes after arresting all Government servants, the radio added.

Karen insurgent hill tribesmen were massing around Nyangshiebin, a rail junction 93 miles north of Rangoon, and had appointed two Moslems—Mr Khan of Lashio, and Mr Rahman of Nyangshiebin—as officers of the Karen police, it said.

In the delta region, 200 Karen, heading north, had entered Maubin district, 40 miles south-west of Rangoon, the radio added.

In the Central Burmese oil-field area fighting has broken out between two sections of the insurgents—the White Band members of the People's Volunteers Organisation and the Red Flag Communists.—Reuters.

Dark Blues Threaten New Zealanders With Their First Defeat

Oxford, May 26.—The New Zealanders, playing Oxford University here, faced their first defeat of the tour. After a day of amazing cricket on a pitch drying after the rain, the tourists finished with half their second innings wickets down for 45 and still requiring 165 runs to beat the University.

Twenty-two wickets fell today for 160 runs. New Zealand and Oxford in turn were out for their lowest scores of the season—New Zealand 110 and Oxford 72—and rarely have so many brilliant catches been seen in a day's play. Rabone, the New Zealand all-rounder, held five at slip.

Oxford were indebted to their medium fast bowlers Wrigley and Whitcombe and very alert fielders.

TENNIS LEAGUE

H. A. Ayres & M. Heenan took 1½ points for HKCC off the normal Chinese Recreation Club sweep in the first match of the Men's "A" Division Tennis League tournament yesterday evening.

Ayres & Heenan drew with Tsui Yun-pui and Choy Tin-fook and beat Leo Yu-wing and Wong Shiu-wing 6-2.

There was a surprise in the Recreco match against South China Athletic Association when Willie Reed and Gerry Gosano, hockey-cricket combination, upset the strong pair of Rock Leung and Kwok Hing-chung, semi-finalists in the Grass Court Open, by a 6-4 score.

In the Ladies' "A" Division, which also got off to a start yesterday, Ladies' Recreation Club, paced by its top pair of Mrs. Slatter and Mrs. Cooper, trounced the Chinese Recreation Club Ladies 7-2.

COUNTY CRICKET

London, May 26.—Rain interfered with today's County Cricket matches and at Lord's and The Oval not a ball could be bowled.

Walton alone defied the Oxford attack, but during his stay of two and a half hours he was struck twice on the right thumb, which he broke on the 1937 tour. He did not field and may not bat.

Oxford, 137-runs ahead on the first innings, failed in turn. Hofmeyr and Law fell to clever slip catches, and the difficulties of Oxford's batsmen were added to by a blustery wind.

Burt got in a lot of work with his left arm spinners on the drying pitch, and the last bowlers were still able to make the ball rear nastily.

Winn played another praiseworthy innings but none of the other batsmen looked comfortable. Half the side were out for 41 and at tea eight wickets were down for 72.

Chinese Red Troops Make A Good Impression

S'HAI SCENES DESCRIBED

Shanghai, May 27.—Communist troops have made a good first impression in Shanghai.

An anti-Communist merchant reported that he saw a Communist soldier eating a bowl of dry rice. A coolie offered the soldier a glass of boiling water, which is the poor man's substitute for tea.

The soldier declined the water and lectured the coolie and the crowd which gathered on the fact that the People's Liberation Communist Army never takes anything from the public.

He said he would go to a hot water shop to quench his thirst.

Developing Middle East

ISRAEL TO PLAY BIG PART

London, May 26.—A great development of the whole Middle East with Israel providing the stimulus was visualised here today by Dr M. Ellash, Israeli Minister in London.

Speaking at a Foreign Press Association luncheon, Dr Ellash said that Israel's future development must certainly be regarded in the light of the general development of the Middle East.

He declared, "Peace of friendly co-operation between Israel and her neighbours, of ranking animosity and lasting suspicion, will determine whether Israel is to be the haven which will invigorate and stimulate the rehabilitation of dormant areas, or will be forced to conduct its own policies, endeavouring to establish for itself a position in the midst of territories lagging behind socially and economically."

Under the United Nations, the Arab States had laid plans for a Middle East Economic Council—but with total disregard of the existence of Israel.

NEW PLANS NATURAL

With the admission of Israel as a member of the United Nations a revision of these plans would be natural, and "Israel's co-operation would be wholehearted and sincere," Dr Ellash said.

"It would be based on the conviction that such co-operation of equal and independent partners must lead to the revival of the glories of a region which once supported large and flourishing populations."

In an awakening Middle East, with large-scale schemes of agricultural and industrial development, the place of Israel became obvious.

The necessity to absorb a large flow of immigration within a short period will force Israel to mobilise all its technical and scientific resources, and to apply its energies and ingenuity to the maintenance of a decent standard of life for its labouring masses," Dr Ellash stated.

"It could certainly serve as an experimental station for the entire Middle East whose achievements would be emulated and successfully repeated elsewhere," he added.

On Israel's political outlook, Dr Ellash said that his country would continue honestly to endeavour to approach international problems with an independent judgment of the principles involved. It would seek to avoid being herded into groupings or combinations.

POLITICAL NEUTRALITY

Its experiment in political neutrality had opened up the almost unique precedent of co-operative and harmonious support by the United States and Russia.

"The problems of Israel's own security will continue to loom large in the cares of its statesmen until such time as nation shall not lift up sword against nation," Dr Ellash continued.

"The defiant attempts of Israel's neighbours to prevent the will of the United Nations by force has brought much suffering and many tragedies in its wake."

It would be in the national interests to co-operate in any movement removing the threat of war.

Many were asking if the young State would be able to carry the staggering burden of creating a new economy and a new social order while doubling the population by immigration in four or five years. The reassuring reply to those doubts lay in the energies of the entire Jewish people which were behind these activities.

"And no doubt international interest and support will be forthcoming for the development schemes which are a necessary corollary of the process of absorption," Dr Ellash said.

Violence In German Rail Strike

An East German railway policeman (centre, uniform) and three Western zone German railway strikers engage in a slugging match in Charlottenburg railroad station in Berlin. The strike, an anti-Communist movement which saw West Berlin police fighting side by side with strikers against Communists and Soviet-controlled railway police, plunged Berlin into mob warfare and slashed the city's rail links with the world.—AP Picture.

10,000 REDS ON BURMA BORDER

Rangoon, May 26.—Confidence that the Chinese Communists would not easily penetrate into Burma was expressed by the Kachin Affairs Minister, Duwe Sinwa Nawang, today.

The Shah added that countries which had suffered less and contributed less towards the Allied victory in the last war had received substantial economic and financial aid from the Allies while Iran had got nothing at all.

Iran's Form Of Govt. Defended

Teheran, May 26.—Mohammed Aza Pahlevi, Shah of Iran, today declared that the existence of a strong and independent Iran was in the interests of the whole world. The 30-year-old King, in an exclusive interview with Reuters, emphatically denied allegations describing Iran's form of government as "beginning from a military dictatorship."

"Iran's form of government is, and will be, on the democracy pattern of the Western European monarchies," he said.

The Shah added that countries which had suffered less and contributed less towards the Allied victory in the last war had received substantial economic and financial aid from the Allies while Iran had got nothing at all.

GIGANTIC PROBLEMS

"Iran's problems seem gigantic but it is not impossible to solve them," the Shah said.

"Persians must have enough work, food and feel protected by social justice."

"I will never get tired of repeating that the rich must pay taxes, and that we need agricultural reforms and insurance for our workers."

"A new labour law is before the Maglis (Parliament)."

"The country's complex administration must be simplified by the creation of provincial municipal councils."

Stating that Iran's present seven-year plan was only one small step forward in the exploitation of Iran's immense resources, the Shah added, "But steps must be taken at once to get a fairer distribution of the country's riches and to induce the people in the over-crowded capital to return to their deserted homes in the provinces and do constructive work there."

NOT HELPFUL

The Shah declared, "We must be able to safeguard our independence and defend our frontiers."

"A strong and independent Iran is in the best interest of the world and the world knows it."

"I am sorry to say that despite the Teheran Declaration issued after the Teheran Conference in 1943 the Allies have not given the help and assistance we were supposed to receive as compensation for our contribution to the victory."

The Shah said that the recent amendment of the country's Constitution was a positive reform in Iran's constitutional law and ensured the proper functioning of a true democracy.

"This will help my people to take a hand not only in the control of their daily lives but in the shaping of their destiny as a whole," he concluded.—Reuter.

SCHACHT'S NEW JOB

New York, May 26.—Hitler's financial wizard, Walther Schacht, has been engaged as a financial expert and adviser by Yarur & Company, the largest textile firm in Chile, an American weekly in German and English, Aufbau, reported today. The newspaper described the Yarur family as among the richest and most influential Chilean families. It said that they were originally Arabs who had adopted Catholicism and become Chilean citizens.—Associated Press.

State-Control Of Rice Exports

Rangoon, May 26.—The Burmese Government has appointed an Inquiry Commission to investigate the problem of State-controlled exports of rice, the mainstay of Burma's economy.

The Commission will report within the next three months on how to step up procurement, export and general overhauling of the rice exporting machinery.—Reuter.

"He has a wonderful appetite—it's his second bowlful—and she's still hungry!"

Violation Of Peace Treaties

Britain May Take New Action

London, May 26.—Diplomatic quarters said today that Britain may take fresh action shortly against violation of the peace treaties by Hungary, Bulgaria and Rumania. This action probably would be taken in conjunction with the United States following joint consultations on the matter.

On April 2, Britain and the United States presented notes to the three governments accusing them of arbitrary exercise of police power, violation of freedom of the individual, and indulging in religious persecution. Bulgaria and Rumania also were accused of violating military stipulations in their peace treaties.

Between April 10 and April 22 the three countries sent negative answers to the British and American governments.

British quarters hinted repeatedly that machinery provided for the peace treaties in case of treaty violations would be set into motion if the three countries did not respond to the Anglo-American representatives. Britain may now make use of that machinery.

NEW VIOLATIONS

Diplomatic quarters said new peace treaty violations had been added to the old ones, particularly regarding recent Hungarian Parliamentary elections.

The machinery of the peace treaties is fairly complicated. At first, the heads of the British, French and Russian missions in Bucharest, Budapest and Sofia must discuss treaty violations.

If their discussions fail, a commission will be appointed in each of the three capitals concerned. The commission will include one representative of the accusing countries, one representative of the country charged with violations and a third member selected by mutual agreement from nationals of a third country. The commission will give its verdict on treaty violations by a majority vote.

If the Anglo-American and satellite representatives do not agree on the appointment of the third commission member, the United Nations Secretary General, Mr Trygve Lie, will make the appointment.

According to the report the Sub-Committee announced that agreement had been reached on the supply of uniforms and equipment for Republican civil police in the Jogjakarta Region.

Stating that Iran's present seven-year plan was only one small step forward in the exploitation of Iran's immense resources, the Shah added, "But steps must be taken at once to get a fairer distribution of the country's riches and to induce the people in the over-crowded capital to return to their deserted homes in the provinces and do constructive work there."

"With regard to armaments, some difficulties have arisen which will be taken into further consideration as soon as possible," the Sub-Committee added.

A large measure of agreement had already been reached concerning technical services to the public such as transport, postal facilities, radio and other communications, supplies and currency, the report disclosed.

IMPORTANT AGREEMENT

The Sub-Committee is to continue its discussions and after completing its work is to submit a full report for discussion and approval by both delegations meeting under the United Nations Commission.

The Sub-Committee also said that both parties had agreed to issue an order immediately to all armed forces in the area "to avoid all contact in arms and to cease immediately any form of sabotage, mining and subversive activity."

The word "immediately" is used in the official text but according to a United Nations Commission spokesman, the necessary order by both parties can only be issued after the Sub-Committee's report has been approved by both delegations meeting under the United Nations Commission here.—Reuter.

"This will help my people to take a hand not only in the control of their daily lives but in the shaping of their destiny as a whole," he concluded.—Reuter.

VILLAGE LIVES ON ITS SAND

Sedgeford, England, May 26.—This Norfolk village runs on sand.

The 700 or so villagers have paid a penny in local taxes for 15 years.

The tax rate is fixed at eight pence on a pound's worth of real estate. But it has not been collected.

Sedgeford has paid all its expenses and made enough taxes to renovate the war memorial and start a new athletic field by buying natural resources.

The natural resources come from a village-owned timber mill—operated by the United Kingdom Forestry Commission.
